[...] you could stuff an elephant in your ear (easy), and then shoot a kangaroo in your eye (crazy). You could do it with a shotgun (foolish), or a club (dangerous). The point is that your actions will always have consequences. If you sleep with your hand on the holster of your Uzi, you will die when you wake up. Think about that. Orwellian Big Brother. Arguably a useful device for keeping people as dumb as possible so they can be more easily controlled, but it's not going to cause them to become more "anarchist". Sure, you can't trust anyone, but then, why should anyone trust you? I hope that has been helpful in elucidating what anarchism and anarchy are really about, in particular, what you might call 'the reality of the anarchist ideology'. Very well, I'll try to answer some of those points. First, it's likely that you have misunderstood anarchism. No one (except for small groups and individuals) operates openly as anarchists. Anarchy is a 'flag of convenience' or a 'convenient by-word' for anarchism, but the vogue for anarchy amongst certain writers in the last hundred years has meant it's now a very unpopular word. Furthermore, anarchism is the exact opposite of communism, for it promotes the right of private property, which has an in-built tendency to concentration, and forms of organisation, which concentrate power. Capitalism is an inherently private enterprise (anarchists are against corporations too), not communistic, although both are free-market ideologies. Religion is a political ideology. The form of anarchy we most associate with is 'anarcho-syndicalism', and is perhaps the most politically significant anarchist movement today. Quote: "It's likely that you have misunderstood anarchism. No one (except for small groups and individuals) operates openly as anarchists." Aha, I never said or implied that. I am personally not an anarchist, but I am aware that anarchism has a very long history and that it is not just a shallow political radicalism. And, as you rightly say, most people who call themselves anarchists do not practise anarchy. They operate within specific hierarchies. However, they often do not admit to it. One reason for this is that they cannot imagine what life would be like in an anarchist society. If that was put to the test, it would be found that people

Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein DOJ kept investigators from completing probe of Trump ties to Russia: report Five takeaways from final Senate Intel Russia report FBI officials hid copies of Russia probe documents fearing Trump interference: book MORE officially resigned from his post on Monday after weeks of pressure from Trump on him to quit. In a short, written statement, Rosenstein said he will resign at noon on Monday. ADVERTISEMENT "I am pleased to announce that I have resigned from my position as deputy attorney general," he said in a statement released by the Justice Department. "It has been the great privilege of my career to serve as deputy attorney general these past two years," Rosenstein said. "I am grateful to you and I will never forget the sacrifices made on my behalf by the members of the FBI and the men and women of the Department of Justice." Democrats have demanded Rosenstein resign since it was revealed he discussed secretly recording Trump and asked the FBI to drop an investigation into former Trump campaign chairman Paul Manafort. Rosenstein told the president in a series of letters his decision not to hold a press conference immediately following the firing of FBI Director James Comey was his own decision. In his final letter, he took Trump to task for a series of tweets he made that Rosenstein said had made the job of leading the Justice Department "untenable." "In my decision to remain as deputy attorney general, I am carrying out my commitment to follow the president's instructions," he said. "At the conclusion of this process, you will have a new deputy attorney general who has the depth of federal prosecutors and who is experienced in handling high-profile investigations. I am confident that he or she will continue the outstanding work being done at the Department of Justice." "I wish you the greatest success in your future endeavors," Rosenstein added. Rosenstein's announcement ends weeks of speculation that his departure was imminent. He was expected to be fired after White House Chief of Staff John Kelly John Francis Kelly MORE resigned late last month. The New York Times reported on March 24 that Rosenstein discussed the possibility of recording Trump and said that the bureau had opened an investigation into whether the president obstructed justice. Rosenstein has denied those conversations and a Justice Department investigation into possible grounds for the case is ongoing. Elevated plasma levels of soluble thromb
